Story Board

This will be an animated comic. When the user clicks, it goes to the next frame /picture. And every "scene" will have small animations, and sounds. And be narrated. The user will have little movement options.

DESCRIPTION OF THE STORY

The Story:

Meet Bob. He is a ordinary boring human being, with nothing really going on in his life. It's an ordinary day for Bob.

He wakes up, and opens his fridge. He look inside of it and it's full of "junk". Frozen pizzas, burgers, alsort of frozen chinese food, Coca Cola and other sodas.

He takes a coca cola, and walks over to his TV, to watch one of his many favorite tv shows.

S12-E19 of "Something Something Stupid". After this, he throws his trash on the ground, and goes over to his window, for a cigarette.

He stare out of the window only yet to realize: - he's still in his cage in the "Disgusting Humans Exhibit" in the Gazorpazorp Alien Zoo.

The Message:

This story has a very important message. We have become slaves to our urges, and nasty behaviors. We as humans have become slaves to an image, a thought that we need to be constantly entertained.. A way of life - we think it has zero consequences.

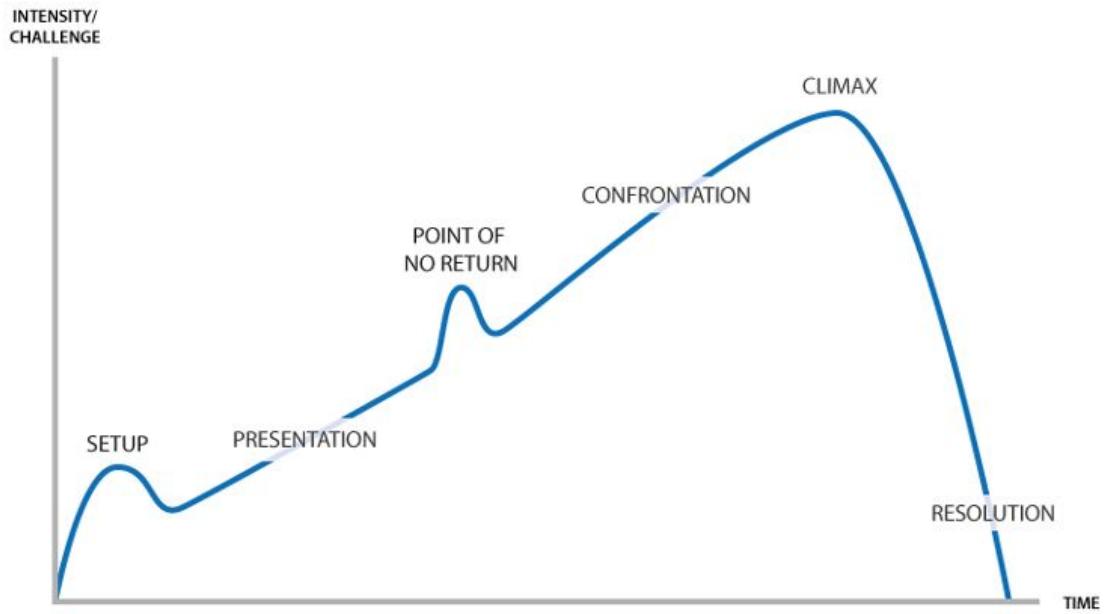

But it has. We are living in invisible cages, made by big corporations, and this is a illusion of free will.

If we want this to change - we will have to start changing it now.

Genre / Mood:

Social Criticism / socio critical criticism / horror /humor.

NARRATIVE CURVE

Setup:

Meet Bob, the narrator will introduce the user to Bob.

Presentation:

We will be introduced to Bobs boring life / world, and the user will be witness to his ugly lifestyle.

Point of no Return:

Bob reaches down his pocket and puts the disgusting cigarette into his mouth. AND LIGHTS it.

Confrontation:

Bob loses his mind to this smoke, even the narrator can't get a hold of Bob.

Climax:

The viewer / user realize that Bob is in an Alien Zoo, on the Gazorpazorp planet.

Resolution:

Nothing really happened... It just a tuesday.. The End.

Dramaturgic Elements

Sound:

A narrator will tell the story about bob, and be a part of the entire story. Other sounds will be in the background of the cage. The fan, the tv and general background noise. To create a more relatable atmosphere.

Movement:

Bob never really moves (which also is the point for bob). But the camera will zoom in on bob. And at the end it will have a full view of bob in his cage in the zoo.

Space Elements:

The texture of Bob is hand drawn and rough on the edges. This is to give it a hand drawn look on purpose. The lines shakes a little to give et an old school hand drawn look. Some elements in the background a real life pictures, and is used to give it all a really odd look. A mix of hand drawn and real life pictures,

Climax:

When the the narrator tells the viewer that bob is not on earth. He is a prisoner in an alien zoo, on the planet Gazorpazorp.
And the fact that Bob is in a Zoo cage.

Style Tile

style tile:

Inspiration is taken from Joan Cornellà.

Contour line:

The contour line is almost never black but colored in this style.

Characters/background relationship:

The background is almost empty and very simple. To make the focus stay on the characters.

Specific characteristics in the style:

It's grotesque, funny, unexpected and sociocritical. and looks like a 1950's advertising or Airline safety pamphlet.

Colours:

The colors are saturated and often warm colors.

Warm cosy colors to a rough comic.

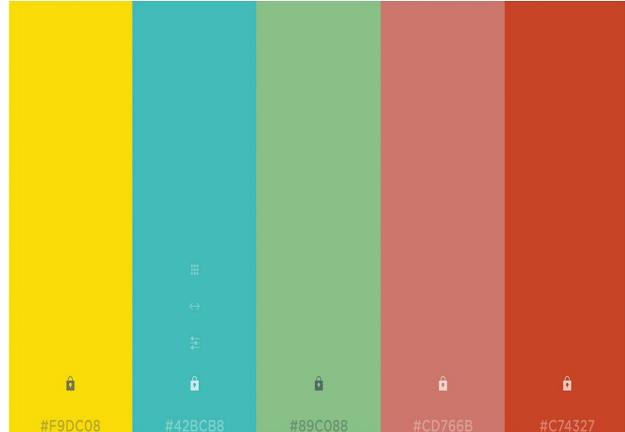

Typography:

Helvetica will be used for this document, but for the comic, no text will be added. The pictures will tell the story.

Zoomed in version.

Explanation of one or more animation principles according to my animation:

Stageing: I want to be in full control of where the users/ viewers look. This is a story where the narrator is control.

Pose to Pose: Was used here, the first and the last drawing were the first to be drawn. As a method for me to see where I started and where I should end.. All the drawings in between came after, to finalize the animation.

Appeal: Here the main focus was to make Bob as boring and unappealing as possible.

This is the sprite sheet of Bob smokin' and here is a link for the full animation:
